Course Description:

Learning, observation and reflection class on global studies regarding status of women internationally, in the history of the United States and connecting it to the current time period. With students reflecting on the information and knowledge from different perspectives, the class will allow students to as well put their opinions through weekly blogs. Learning from these perspectives are important as different places reflect different cultures and values of societies and their view point. Even with differences, students will be able to create connections and implement the learning in current time.
